HOUSTON, Tex., June 29. — Democracy's hosts went forth to battle under a platform standard calling for strict enforcement of the eighteenth amendment, promising agriculture equality with industry and attacking Republican corruption.

These were the major planks in the 1928 platform which was adopted in a virtual love feast on the convention floor after the prohibition row had been smoothed over in the resolutions committee.

The prohibition declaration, couched in words somewhat similar to those used by the Republicans at Kansas City, said: "This convention pledges the party and its nominees to an honest effort to enforce the eighteenth amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

Coupled with the pledge was a denunciation of the Republican party in these words:

"The Republican party, for eight years in complete control of the government at Washington, presents the remarkable spectacle of feeling compelled in its national platform to promise obedience to a provision of the federal constitution which it has flagrantly disregarded and to apologize to the HOUSTON, Tex., June 29. — Leaders of the "on to Houston" movement for farm relief left for their homes today declaring that a new alliance between the New York "East Side" and the "corn belt" would be carried out in full.

Preparing to assume the offensive in the presidential campaign, the farm chieftains had plans already under way for a meeting to begin mobilization of their forces.

Having promised the Democratic party three million farmer votes in hearings before the resolutions committee, the leaders of the "farm revolt" declared that they would perfect an organization in every agricultural state to make good the promise.

A tentative call for a meeting of the corn belt conference in Des Moines, Ia., on July 12 is already out, according to Thomas E. Cashman of Minnesota, chairman of the Minnesota council of agriculture and a leader in the fight here.

This group, having a membership of twenty-six farm organizations, is headed by William Hirth of Columbia, Mo., who already has sworn unyielding enmity to Secretary Herbert Hoover.

Despite the hearty endorsement of the 1,400-word plank on farm relief adopted by the convention, some observers expressed the opinion that a controversy over its interpretation would immediately ensue.

The sentence which was declared by farm chiefs to bind the party to the equalization fee reads: "We pledge the party to an earnest endeavor to solve the problem of the distribution of the cost of dealing with crop surpluses over the marketed units of the crop whose producers are benefited by such assistance."

Senator Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the resolutions committee, interpreted the plank to permit adoption of farm relief other than by use of the equalization fee.

"I think this recognizes the state of facts that called for the equalization fee," he said. "There are two or three other remedies which will accomplish the same result but those who favor the McNary-Haugen bill think this method is the best."

George N. Peek, generalissimo of the farm forces here, was satisfied with the convention action. "They have endorsed the substance of what we have been contending for," he said.

country for its failure to enforce laws enacted by the congress of the United States."

Both wet and dry leaders described the plank as satisfactory and friends of Gov. Al Smith, the party nominee said it would not embarrass the New Yorker's views favoring liberalization of the Volstead act. Senator Glass of Virginia wrote the plank after a more liberal pronouncement had been rejected by the drafting committee. Gov. Dan Moody, the Texas dry leader, said he would support it. Governor Ritchie of Maryland, champion of the wet, approved the declaration of party policy.

Bishop James Cannon of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, put his stamp of approval on it. So did Senator Wagner of New York, spokesman for Governor Smith.

On farm relief the platform promised the farmers an earnest endeavor would be made to solve the problem of distribution of the cost of dealing with crop surpluses over the marketed units of the crop whose producers are benefited by such assistance. Farm leaders said this language embraced the old equalization fee principle of the McNary-Haugen bill, without closing the doors on a new form of relief legislation.

A pledge was made to create a federal farm board to assist the farmers and stock raisers in the

TRAVELERS WANT BETTER METHODS OF DISTRIBUTION

COLUMBUS, O., June 29.—A movement to link up with national wholesalers' and manufacturers' associations for the promotion of better distribution methods was under way here today as the result of a resolution passed by the supreme council of the United Commercial Travelers at the closing of the annual meeting here yesterday.

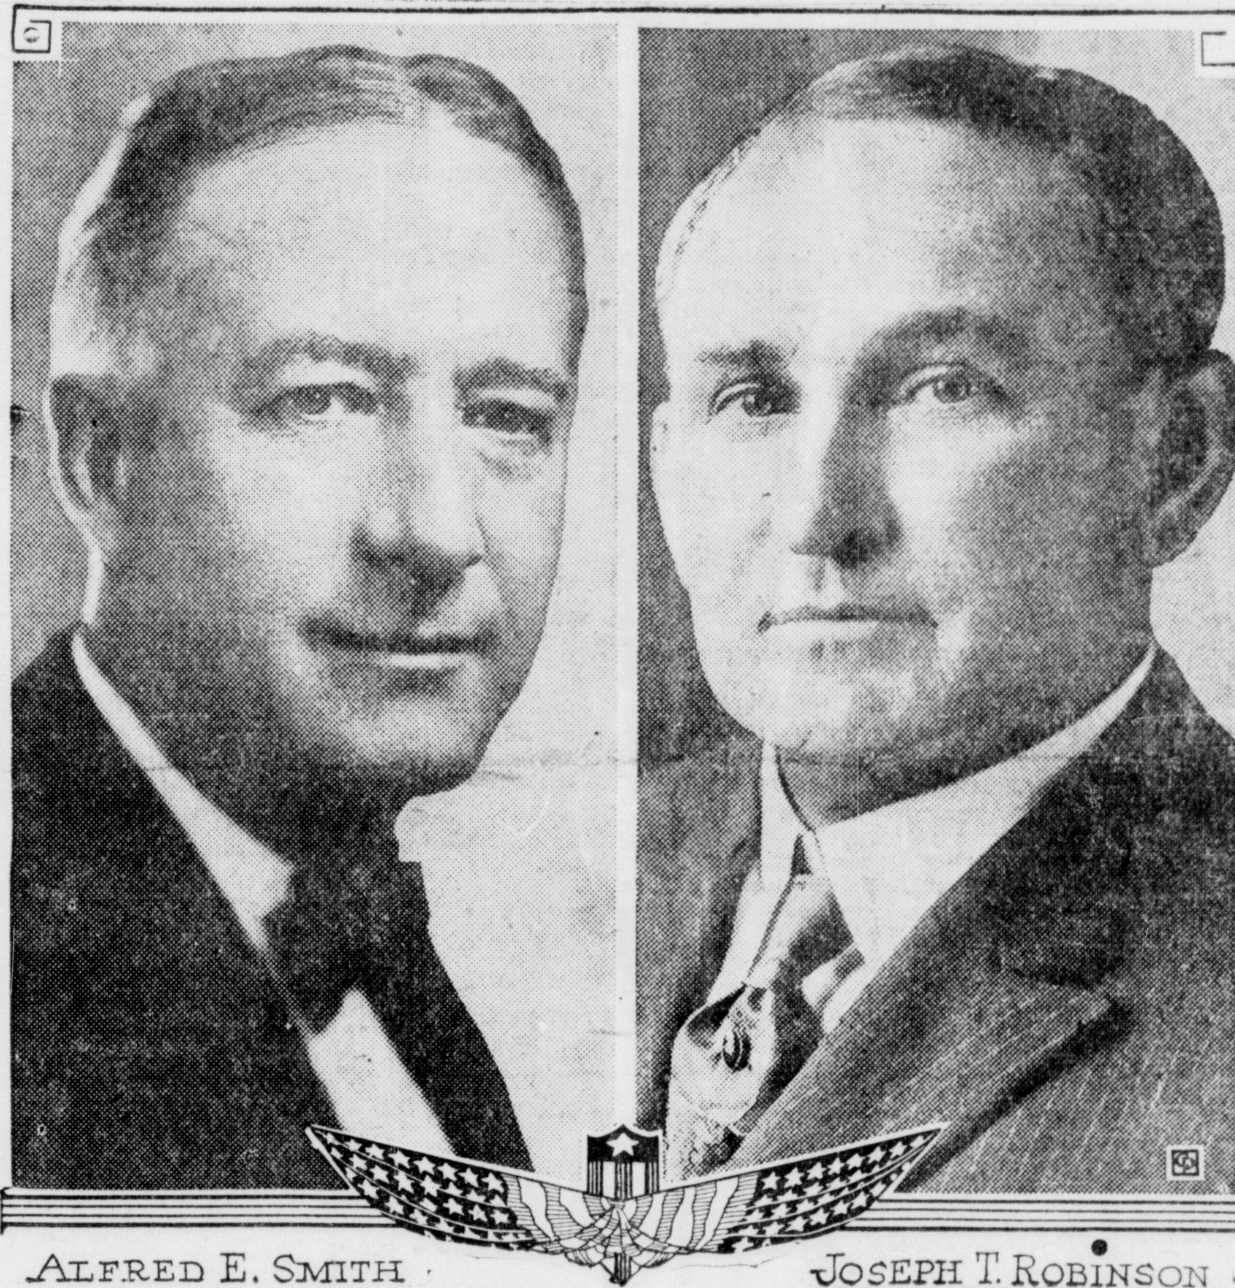

The resolution provides that the supreme executive committee, composed of Warren S. Trace, Zanesville, chairman; C. A. Johnson, Cleveland, and Walter S. Arndt, Dayton, will have full charge of the movement. Application for membership in the national chamber of commerce is to be made, in connection with the move.

George M. Peterson, Duluth, Minn., was elected supreme sentinel at the meeting yesterday. According to the method of choosing the national officers of the order, this is the first step toward the office of supreme counselor, M. J. Martin, Houston, Texas, who was inducted as supreme counselor, appointed William S. Rau, Houston, as supreme chaplain.

At Meet.

COLUMBUS, O., June 29.—Adoption of the G. O. P. state platform and selection of Republican candidates for presidential electors, subject to the November election, are scheduled to take place at the closing session of the Republican state convention here this morning.

Candidates for the Republican nomination for U. S. senator are expected to make brief addresses.

Demonstrations for gubernatorial candidates and the hearty singing, by the assembled delegates and alternates, of campaign songs predicting the election of Hoover and Curtis featured the initial session of the convention at Memorial Hall late yesterday. Addresses were delivered by Attorney General Edward C. Turner, Columbus; Myers Y. Cooper, Cincinnati, and Congressman James T. Begg, Sandusky, U. S. Senators Simeon D. Fess, Yellow Springs, due to the lateness of the hour, abandoned his intention of making a brief informal talk. His voice failing him, Cooper was forced to shorten his address.

The convention adopted resolutions registering the sorrow of the Republican party over the death of late U. S. Senator Frank B. Willis and sent telegrams of greetings to President Coolidge, Secretary of Commerce Hoover and U. S. Senator Charles Curtis.

The Hamilton County delegation launched a demonstration, lasting several minutes, for Cooper after he finished his talk. A demonstration for Begg, led by a uniformed Sandusky school band, was staged by thirteenth district delegates at the close of Begg's address.

G. O. P. PLATFORM OFFERED AT CLOSING CONVENTION SESSION

COLUMBUS, O., June 29.—Pledging "unqualified support" to the presidential candidacy of Herbert Hoover and "deploring" the election code veto of Governor Donahy, the G. O. P. state platform, a structure in which were riveted twenty forceful planks was offered to Ohio Republicans at the closing session of the Republican Convention here today.

Besides avowing support of cabinet officers and U. S. Senator Curtis, for Vice President, the platform specifically endorsed the record of the Coolidge administration, approved the accommodation of the Republican General Assembly, pledged the party adoption of sound business policy and the support of measures to equalize and restrict taxation.

Further the platform taking cognizance of the controversial subject of Farm Relief pledged the party to "prevent any unjust discrimination against agriculture and industry."

The platform condemns the "dilatory tactics" of adequate housing and proper segregation of the feeble-minded. Vocational training in penal institutions, advancement of education, the protection of labor, speedy settlement of compensation claims, reforestation, elimination of railroad grade crossings, equitable utility rates, conscientious enforcement of laws, speedy administration of criminal justice, condemnation of lynching, erection of the new state office building, development and expansion of aviation, the re-establishment of the state library, all received approving consideration in the platform.

SMITH DODGED FRIDAY JINX

HOUSTON, Tex., June 29.—Al Smith, by six minutes, escaped being nominated on a Friday, a day which many women voters consider unlucky. It was 11:54 p. m. on Thursday that it was announced from the platform that Governor Smith was the Democratic presidential nominee.

The governor, according to members of Mrs. Smith's party attending the convention, is not superstitious—but plenty of other voters are. This group is so numerous that the Wilson campaign managers in 1912 recognized his prejudices to the extent of sidetracking platform action on a Thursday to have Woodrow Wilson nominated before Friday rolled around.

"THERE IT IS" SAYS AL

"My Heart Is Where My Palate Ought To Be"

Says Nominee.

ALBANY, N. Y., June 29.—

"There it is."

These were the three words that made political history early this morning when Governor Al Smith, sitting in the blue room of the executive mansion heard the secretary of the Democratic national convention at Houston announce over the radio the switch of Ohio votes that assured him his party nomination for president. It was a typical Al Smith expression, characteristic of that quality of humanity which Franklin D. Roosevelt stressed in his nominating speech at Houston.

Seated in his home before his radio set, surrounded only by his friends, the governor seemed like a boy as the news came, punctuating the radio announcements with puns and Smithesque remarks. Then he was cheered by neighbors and greeted by hundreds who called him "Al" in an amazing demonstration which shattered the early morning quiet of this old Dutch city.

"There it is," said Al Smith, the man. Here is what Alfred E. Smith, governor of New York, presidential candidate of the Democratic party, gave out as his official statement.

"My nomination on the first ballot fills me with joy and satisfaction that I know is shared by my family and friends. My heart is where my palate ought to be."

NEW YORK GOVERNOR SELECTED ON FIRST BALLOT AT HOUSTON

Only Six States Remained Out Of Parade For Party Choice; Smith Friends Say Candidate Not Embarrassed By Dry Plank

HOUSTON, Tex., June 29.—It will be Alfred E. Smith for president and Joseph T. Robinson for vice president against Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis in November.

The convention this afternoon nominated Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, to be the running mate of Governor Al Smith of New York, on the first ballot.

Robinson's official vote was 1,032. After the roll call showed Robinson had won an overwhelming victory, states that had not supported him, corrected their vote to be added to the Robinson column. Senator Barkley of Kentucky and Former Governor Nellie Tayloe Ross, Wyoming withdrew their names in favor of Robinson after the roll call.

The vote followed a long session of nominating speeches, in which six candidates were placed before the convention. When the session opened Senator Robinson, permanent chairman, because he was a candidate, relinquished the gavel to Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, who presided over the final session of the convention.

The Robinson nomination paralleled that of Governor Smith last night, the delegates changing their votes to give an overwhelming victory to the leading candidate on the first ballot in each instance.

The official vote was: Robinson, 1032; Barkley, 9; Stevenson, 2; Mrs. Ross, 2; Woollen, 2; Moody, 9 1-3. Selection of Smith's running mate was followed by a demonstration in which the entire convention took part, aided and abetted by the bands.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 29.—United at last after eight years of wandering in the wilderness of discord that stretched from San Francisco in 1920 to New York in 1924, the untried Democracy went back to Houston's big pine tabernacle today to name a running mate for Al Smith and to wind up this historic Democratic convention in a grand chorus of harmony.

The big plunge has been taken. Al Smith is the nominee, the first of his religious faith in the history of American politics to be nominated for the presidency by any major political party. A platform has been adopted that accomplished the seemingly impossible task of placating both the eastern and northern wets and the southern and western dries.

There remained today only the job of nominating a vice president, and Sen. Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas appeared to be "it" in this new game of Democratic fraternizing.

Veterans of San Francisco and New York could scarcely believe their eyes when they saw a Democratic platform adopted in open convention without a minority report even being offered on the floor within less than two hours after its presentation and without a roll call vote. Hardly could they believe when their pencils told them that Al Smith, wet, a pillar of Tammany and a Roman Catholic to boot, was nominated on the first ballot with 849 2-3 out of a possible 1,100 votes.

In the end, all of the state standards from Southern states, of course, Texas, Alabama, Georgia, the two Carolinas, Florida, were recorded as casting no votes for Smith, for the traditional motion picture of the nomination of the New York governor unanimous was not offered.

The convention reached crescendo proportions when the sardonic, smiling "Jim" Reed, of Missouri, smiling through his disappointment, faced the convention which had refused him, pledged his support to the ticket and in a characteristic speech denounced Herbert Hoover as a "renegade American."

SCHOOL BOARD HAS ADOPTED BUDGET

Adoption of the 1929 budget with its estimate of operating expenses for the Xenia school system next year was the principal business transacted at a meeting of the City Board of Education Thursday night.
The budget will be submitted to the County Budget Commission for approval.
The board was unable to consider except informally, applications for a successor to H. C. Pendry, city school superintendent, who, although he has indicated he will accept a similar post at Ironton, O., to which he was elected recently, has not actually handed in his formal resignation.
James Adair, president of the board, estimates that more than forty applications for the Xenia superintendency are on file for future consideration.

OTEY PICKS AL SMITH

And Card Sharps Pick Otey—Now He Has To Ride Home With Load Of Cattle

By MARSHAL OTEY WALKER
Special Central Press Correspondent for The Gazette and Delegate to the Democratic Convention, HOUSTON, Tex., June 29.—The convention is done for, and so am I—almost. If I get home in time to vote it will be after so long that I will have forgotten who's running. I'm glad the Democrats picked

Al Smith. I was for him all the time. He's a great fellow. In case he is elected I'd be the last man to ask him for a job just because I helped him get the nomination. I don't believe in patronage. But if Al is elected I'll drop in at Washington next spring for a little talk. If he wants to offer me the post office job in the Old Home Town I'll take it. The old fellow we have now is no good and I'm going to tell the new president so. That's why I'm going up.

Tonight, if the train leaves on time, I'm going to start for home. I hung around Clem Shaver, Senator Robinson, George Brennan and a few of the other big boys today, kind of hoping they needed another man for their trip home, but they were all kind of busy.
I had just enough money left for an upper berth home, but as I wanted to hit the Old Home Town in style I dropped into a clubroom on Capitol St., not far from Texas St. A bunch of men were sitting around a table holding cards in their hands and playing with little round discs of red, white and blue. It all looked very patriotic.
They asked me if I wanted to play, but I said I didn't know how. "Got any money?" asked one man. "Some," I said. "You'll learn easy," he said, and gave me a chair.
Well, it seems the game is decided by the dots on the card. It's a funny game. One dot makes the card worth more than any other dot. Two dots is the smallest card except when it is crazy or wild or something.
The game was going along fine, and I was building a regular fence out of the little discs in front of me when the first man said: "Let's shoot everything on the next hand and quit."
We did. At the end of the game, with all our money in the center of the table, the first man and I were the only ones left. He ended the game by asking: "Who is the luckiest man in the world? And what are your best cards?"
"Lindbergh," I answered, "and I have four kings."
"No," he answered. "I am, because I have four aces."
Well, as I said, I believe my train is going to leave tonight, but I'm not sure.
You see, I never bummed my way in a cattle car before.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

A FAITHFUL WARNING.—The beginning of strife is as when one letteth out water: therefore leave off contention, before it be meddled with.—Prov. 17:14.

NOT BLOWING OWN HORN

The American people admire Amelia Earhart, first woman to fly over the ocean, not merely for her great achievement, but for her quiet and self-effacing modesty. She is one of those folks who do big things, but never make any fuss about it, and are not looking for any limelight to shine in.

When she attended Hyde Park high school near Chicago, Miss Earhart was known as the "meek girl who always wore brown." Thus it often happens that the people who make the biggest stir in the world are the folks who never boast of their achievement. They let someone else do the horn blowing.

REAL REASON TO CELEBRATE

One favorite method of celebrating the nation's birthday on July Fourth, has always been to read America's famous Declaration of Independence.

The long list of grievances which the colonists complained of have long ceased to constitute an issue. But certain principles of government were laid down that are eternal.

It was there proclaimed that the purpose of government is to secure the people life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness. Unless a government makes human life secure, unless it gives them a reasonable degree of freedom, and unless it makes possible a reasonable degree of comfort and well being that can be considered happiness, it can not long endure. When governments fail to do these things, they need some kind of change. It is the glory of the government established July 4, 1776, that it has given more of these aims than any government on earth.

SPENDING MILLIONS TO TALK

It is estimated that at the end of 1927 there were 18,500,000 telephones in the United States, 60 per cent of the world's instruments. They are increasing in number at the rate of 750,000 a year, and the forecast is made that at the beginning of 1930 more than 20,000,000 telephones will be in use.

This is the result of untiring initiative and enterprise. It seemed that 1927 reached the heights of telephone development. Trans-Atlantic communication became an actuality, and television practical; service was instituted to other countries on this continent.

But the industry did not rest on its laurels. The 1928 program is the greatest in telephone industry. More than $400,000,000 is being spent in making changes, additions and improvements to plant and exchange equipment. Service in every state and in thousands of communities is to be bettered at a cost larger than that of constructing the Panama Canal.

All this is being done that we may have the invaluable privilege of picking up a receiver and talking immediately to anyone we wish.

HOW MUCH IS 320 BILLION?

To illustrate the increase in wealth and the industrial progress which this country has achieved since 1850, the following data is interesting.

The United States is worth $320,000,000,000, an increase of 4,400 per cent since 1850. Railroad mileage has increased from 93,296 to 250,000 and value of manufactures from $9,372,379,000 to $62,700,000,000. The value of exports has risen from $850,000,000 to $4,870,000,000. We have discharged a debt to Europe of $600,000,000 and have foreign credit of $14,000,000,000.

Such accomplishments are the result of individual initiative and ability.

With a new one being established about every 24 hours or even less, our aviation endurance records don't seem to have much endurance.

The Way of the World

By GROVE PATTERSON

THE LEADING LAW FACTORY

America operates the leading law factory of the world. We are told that truly by James A. Emery, general counsel of the National Association of Manufacturers. We enact more laws than are even proposed in a similar period in Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy and Belgium combined. Laws clog the code of the nation. Congressmen, trying to impress the home folks, introduce bills that nobody ought to be for. State legislators do the same thing. What this country needs is some thoughtful repealing.

THE NICE NINETIES

It is customary to laugh at the "gay nineties" and think of that period of thirty or thirty-five years ago as dull, respectable. And now comes the Board of Censors and bars from New York theatres a motion picture film that was a knockout of the 1890's. It has to do with a dancer, popular during the Chicago World's Fair of 1893.

People who are so sure about the good old times are often people with poor memories.

THE GARDEN OF EDEN

More than eighty sites have been suggested as the earliest home of the human race in a dispute that has been going on 2,000 years. Most scientists now agree that central Asia was the home of the first human beings. The oldest human remains, 500,000 years old, were found in Java, once a part of Asia and now an island. Tools dating back apparently 50,000 years have been found in China. The Asiatic continent has been dry land for millions of years—dry when other parts of the now inhabited earth were under water. Biblical writers who placed the Garden of Eden in Asia seem to have known what they were talking about. Some day other discoveries may be made which will prove the case.

It doesn't speak very well for our powers of discovery, analysis and curiosity that after all these centuries the origin of mankind is still

The Diary of a New Yorker

By CLARK KINNAIRD

NEW YORK, June 29.—Helping visiting women sow tame oats is an established profession in New York, the city of strange occupations. There are several bureaux devoted to supplying women escorts for women visitors, or chaperons for parties of young girls.

Most of the clientele of the bureaux are middle-aged and elderly women. Some of them are alone in the city and unable to enjoy solitary sight-seeing; others are playing hooky from families that were disposed to show them Grant's Tomb and the Woolworth building when they really wanted to see Greenwich Village and Harlem.

The women on the staffs of the bureaux are all married and between 35 and 40 years old. For managers of the bureaux quickly found that even grandmothers prefer as companions young appearing women who are smartly dressed and festive.

There also are agencies which undertake to supply young men visitors to the city who have character references.

New Yorkers find it convenient to turn over visiting Aunt Hettie or Joe's mother or Cousin Sue to one of the bureaux for entertainment.

New York speakeries are to be closed on Sunday. Not by the police, however. Bartenders want a day off.

NEW YORK, June 29.—While the British shop is rapidly becoming Americanized, the American shop is going in for the British way of doing things. London stores now emulate the organization and methods of New York shops. In turn, New York shops are copying the sociable methods of British department stores. Tea is now served in Fifth avenue shops to all customers who come in between 3 and 5, and clerks are encouraged to build up personal following. Fifth avenue shops also curtain their windows nights and Sundays, just as British stores do.

Texas Guinan, the queen of clubs, says "Good night" at 11 a. m. She does her sleeping between noon and midnight.

Adolphe Menjou, the cinematographer, wears sport shirts with both collar and cuffs attached to and laundered to the shirt.

Florence Ziegfeld, who wrote a letter to the Federation of Women's Clubs denouncing beauty contests, has six contest winners in the chorus of one of his shows, Augustin Duncan, for 35 years an outstanding figure in the American theater, now is blind, but he continues to serve as a stage director.

Strangers In Their Home Town

By CHARLES B. BRISCOLL

Visitors to New York who spend two weeks in the city generally get over more ground than is traversed by the average native New Yorker in half a lifetime. I know several New Yorkers who have never taken so much as a half a day for looking their town over. They travel long distances to and from work, and let exploration of other parts of the city go until some imaginary time in the distant future.

Recently Miss Katherine Young, native New Yorker, who is connected with landscape gardening enterprises, told me that she has never visited either Coney Island or Staten Island. I know several New Yorkers who have never been in Brooklyn borough.

Traffic space is becoming so valuable in New York that it is a determined sentiment crystallizing against any sort of private encroachment upon it. The City Committee on Plan and Survey recommends prohibition of all parking in the streets. This certainly must come soon, at least in Manhattan borough.

One of the first steps toward abolition of private hogging of public space will be the removal of the sight-seeing buses from the curbs of Times Square. On bright days one can walk about the Square and count forty or fifty of these huge vehicles, standing in the streets while ballyhoo men with Bowery manners try to herd customers their way. Of course, it is whispered about town that political wire-pulling makes it impossible to dislodge these worst of all space hogs from their places of business in the public highways.

Great, wide express highways along all the river fronts are being planned by the Survey Committee. Also, underground walks, with entrances and exits inside business buildings, are strongly recommended. There are many of these pedestrian walkways under streets and buildings in the Grand Central area now, and they help to relieve traffic congestion on the surface.

The Committee agrees with the general plan in insisting that all elevated railways should be removed as soon as possible. The I. roads have few friends. They are unsightly, noisy, and odoriferous. But they carry millions of passengers, and they cannot be abolished before there are many new subway lines to take care of the traffic.

How to Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

Around the World With Beauty France

It is not possible to speak about the French beauty without launching on a discussion of chic, for undoubtedly and undeniably the French woman is the smartest dressed in the world.

To save myself from the avalanche of criticism which this comment of mine invariably brings, I am going to tell you first, that beauty and chic are not synonymous. One may be complemented by the other or again it may not.

Whether the French woman is judged beautiful or not must always depend largely upon the personal taste of the judge. But from one end of the world to the other her smartness is unquestioned.

The very same good taste which distinguishes her dress, and makes the Rue de la Paix the birthplace of styles, has made her not only an arbiter of fashion, but of cosmetics as well.

Whatever makeup errors her cousins across a border may commit, you may be assured that the Frenchwoman is guiltless of them.

On the Bois, the Tuileries, the Champs Elysee, the smart young Parisienne is the epitome of good grooming. Her daytime makeup, only faintly artificial in effect, is a masterpiece of exquisite color tones.

Her powder may be inexpensive, but she never errs on shade. At night in the Moulin Rouge, or at the Montmartre, the well-groomed simplicity of her daytime makeup disappears. Her evening ensemble is equally becoming, and the trained eye will see that lighter rouge, more vivid lip paste and eye shadows in the most exquisite tones, have gone into its artistic completion. The Parisienne stands out in every gathering for the very perfection of her complexion.

Incorrect use, heavy and obvious makeup never stales the Parisienne's infinite variety.

There is no trick of cosmetics that the Parisienne has not mastered. She knew before all the rest of the fashionable world that rouge and lipstick must match exactly, that powder must blend with the natural tones of the skin. Perhaps it is not strictly beauty, but it is a charm that many a lover woman might well envy.

The reducing pamphlet which we offered a year ago contained a much longer list of foods, with their caloric values. I had to discontinue its use because the publishers of my book quite naturally objected, saying it was interfering with the sale of the book. However, the one which we offer now contains all of the principles on reducing and gaining, and a sufficient list of the caloric values of foods so that you can get a good start.

Although desirable, it is not necessary that you should buy any book, for the pamphlet gives you the biggest of the reducing instructions, and you can go to a public library and copy a list of foods, with their caloric values, from some textbook. The column rules for obtaining material we offer are to enclose 2 cents in coin and a self-addressed stamped envelope for all articles except the reducing and gaining pamphlet, for which 10 cents in coin, in addition to the self-addressed, stamped envelope, are necessary. These charges are to help defray cost of printing and handling.

Pernicious Anemia It has been proven that liver markedly benefits pernicious anemia. Whether it has a specific action upon the blood-making organs—the bone marrow, and possibly the liver, spleen and other lymphatic glands—so that new blood cells are rapidly made, or whether it acts by destroying the poison that is causing the destruction of the cells, is not known. Perhaps it does both.

From one-half to one pound of liver daily is necessary, and this becomes very burdensome; so pernicious anemia patients will be gratified to know that there is now a liver extract put out by a reliable concern under the direction of the committee on pernicious anemia of the Harvard medical school.

problems, and New York is not much worse off than Springfield, For, while the problems here are tremendous, there is plenty of money to be had for scientific projects to relieve conditions.

Household Hints

MENU HINT

In most families less meat is consumed in the summer than in the winter. Use more fish, is my advice to the housewives, if you can possibly sell the idea to your family. My experience has been that men object to the serving of fish often in the family. If the fish is not boned they don't like to take time to pick out the bones. The tuna fish Newburg, included in the day's menu, is a tasty dish for hot weather, which sidesteps this objection.

Tuna Newburg, Baked Potatoes

Cabbage Salad

Prune Chocolate Custard

Today's Recipes.

Tuna Newburg.—One tablespoon butter, one and one-half cups thin cream, one and one-half tablespoons chopped green pepper, one one-half tablespoon grated onion, two cups tuna fish, one egg, one and one-half tablespoons chopped pimiento. Melt butter, add flour and the cream gradually. Bring to boiling. Add peppers, pimiento, onions and tuna. Add egg slightly beaten and cooked three minutes. Serve in timbale cases, patty cases or on toast. Time in combining about twenty minutes. Time in cooking ten minutes. Serves six.

Prune-Chocolate Custard.—One-third cup cooked prunes, drained, pitted and cut in quarters. One cup milk, one egg, two tablespoons sugar. Pour milk over egg mixture and add prunes. Pour into custard cups or small baking dish. Set in a pan of hot water and bake in the center. Cool and unmold. For the chocolate sauce, heat one-half cup prune juice; pour it over one level tablespoon ground chocolate or one teaspoon cocoa. Add one-half teaspoon butter and cook five minutes. Serves three.

Whole Wheat Flour Gems (Mrs. Mary Morton's Daily Tested Recipe.)

One cup sour milk, one teaspoon soda, one tablespoon shortening, three tablespoons molasses; make a medium batter with all wheat flour.

A USE FOR OLD JAR RINGS (From Successful Farming Magazine)

When jelly glasses without lids are used, cover with manilla paper, then use a jar ring to hold paper in place. These can be labeled on top.

X-rays will destroy them, but they are very dangerous except in the hands of an expert physician who specializes in their use. We have an article on the subject that will tell you a little something to do for the condition. See directions above for obtaining it.

Tomorrow: Baby Locomotion.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dr. Peters cannot diagnose nor give personal advice. Your questions, if of general interest, will be answered in the column, in turn. Requests for articles must be accompanied by a fully self-addressed, stamped envelope and two cents in coin for each article to cover cost of printing and handling. For the pamphlet on reducing and gaining, ten cents in coin with fully self-addressed, stamped envelope. Address: Dr. Peters in care of this paper.

Behind The Scenes in Houston, Texas

By CHARLES P. STEWART

HOUSTON, June 29.—Democrats were still assembling in Houston when news arrived of the selection of Dr. Hubert Work of Colorado, secretary of the interior, as Herbert Hoover's campaign manager, of his choice of new officials of the Republican national committee, with the additional information that these workers in the political vineyard are somewhat puzzled as to methods of raising adequate funds to cultivate the country in behalf of the G. O. P.

Whereat, the disciples of Jefferson chortled joyfully.

It was the end toward which they'd been striving for lo! the last two or three years, and naturally they were pleased at tidings that their labors had been crowned with a measure of success.

Corruption in politics!

That's been the Democratic watchword for at least two sessions of congress—and previously, too, but for the last couple of sessions especially.

A big share of the credit for it goes to Senator Jim Reed.

Jim, of all others, has refused to be diverted by any other slogan. The tariff, the farm problem, Nicaragua, prohibition!—all these Jim has subordinated to the corruption issue.

And now we begin to see what it was all about.

Of course Reed's contention was that his side was as pure as the driven snow and the other side as foul as they make.

But that wasn't the point. The main point was to get the public all stirred up on the subject of campaign contributions—not so much with a view to making 'em hard to get, as with a view to making 'em darned dangerous to accept.

The question may be put:

Doesn't this cut at both ways? Maybe so, but on the Democratic side the cut's a mere scratch, while on the Republican side it's a wash on a foot deep.

The Republican national committee always can dig up all the money it needs, or, if it can't, its credit's mighty good.

The Democratic national committee invariably has to hustle like sixty for a small fraction of as much as the other folks raise with ease. Moreover people don't like to trust the Democratic crowd very far, for the simple reason that they get licked too often for comfort, and when they're licked it's blamed difficult for 'em to pay up.

It follows logically that anything which cramps the G. O. P. for dough is correspondingly to Aunty Democracy's advantage. As for Aunty she's used to poverty.

It appears that this diabolical scheme has worked, more or less. A senate investigating committee's on the job, ready to poke its nose into campaign expenditures any old time—a reckless kind of a committee, with few party ties, which has made a lot of trouble already.

The voters are suspicious and finicky.

As much money as usual doubtless is available, but if it isn't safe to spend any of it, what good does it do?

The money probably is lacking to make the donkey go any faster than he ever did.

If the elephant, however, is deprived of the financial resources to enable him to maintain his former pace, the donkey's hopeful of passing him that way just as satisfied as if he'd accelerated his own footsteps.

Go it, elephant! Come on, donkey!

Living and Loving

Just Punishment

How many of us are willing to take our punishment like men?

We transgress lightly and readily enough, but when it comes to paying for our wrongdoing, we balk. We are willing for others to "reap as they sow," but we think we should come off scot free. We can always find excuses for ourself. That is the attitude of the young man who writes the following letter. He feels very much abused because his girl friend's mother does not trust him, although he admits that he has not always treated girls well:

"Dear Mrs. Lee: I am a boy 18 and am going with a girl two years my junior. I have been going with her for a year and steady for about eight months. Her folks never said anything about not wanting her to go with me until about five weeks ago. I admit that I have done some unjust things in the past with other girls, but I treat this girl as a nice girl should be treated. Just the other night I had a date with her and her folks made her go with them. She had asked her mother before if she could go and her mother had said yes. I love this girl and I think she loves me. Could you advise me what to do? Her mother thinks I am not decent. What can I do to prove to her that I am?

"How often do you think I should go to see this girl? Her mother thinks once a week is enough.

"ANXIOUS"

Possibly the girl's parents just recently found out that your reputation was not good, and very naturally think their girl is not safe with you. The only way you can prove that they are wrong is to continue to live right and treat the girl properly. Have a talk with them, if possible, and tell them you realize you haven't always done what was right, but you are sorry. You love their daughter and mean nothing but good for her. I think once or twice a week is enough for a girl that age to have company, especially if she is in school.

Peter's Adventure

DOWN ON OSTRICH FARM

It was Bobolink's way to come to a full stop in the most interesting part of his story. This he did now, repeating his question—"What do you suppose the prize was?"

"Can't guess! Tell us quickly," cried Peter and the Rabbits in chorus, and Peter added, "We never watched an ostrich race in our lives. How could we know?" "An old hoe!" declared Mrs. Bobolink, before her husband could answer. "Husband and I were never so surprised! But our new friend of the farm explained that the Two-Legs who kept the corral gave the Ostriches queer things for just such purposes. Shoes, brick bats, scraps of leather, old pieces of wood, even tennepny nails were considered choice tidbits by the Ostriches. When these were offered as prizes the race was sure to be a good one. All the youngsters wanted to win them."

"Ever since we had flown over the fence something strange had been going on in a corner of the corral, but I hadn't paid much attention because I just had to see that race!" twittered Mr. Bobolink, who couldn't keep his bill shut long. "Now wife nudged me and pointed it out."

"What in the world is Two-Legs doing to that poor Ostrich over yonder?" cried she. "Is he going to have his head chopped off? I wonder? Look! What is that? Another Two-Legs is pulling over that ostrich's head?"

Sonny-Bunny was an impatient little rabbit. He didn't wait for Bobolink to tell what happened but sitting up on his hind legs he waved his front legs in the air.

"Chop off his head! Oh, I hope he did! Not that I wouldn't feel sorry for the little ostrich, but it would make things so exciting."

"No, the Two-Legs didn't do anything of the kind, Sonny-Bunny, you cruel youngster!" cried Mrs. Bobolink. "Hurry up, Bob, you talk the rest of it." "Well as wife said before," continued Mr. Bobolink, "there stood a tall ostrich in a sort of three cornered pen, and over his head and neck one Two-Legs had pulled a long hood that looked like a sheet and another Two-Legs stood by with a great pair of scissors in his hand. It did look as if something dreadful was about to happen. But our guide trotted over nearer to the pen so we could get a fine view of what was going on and told us not to worry.

RAIN FORCES GAME POSTPONEMENT HERE

The Downtown Country Club softball team lost ground in the National League when rain forced postponement of the scheduled game with St. Brigid High School Thursday night.

The league-leading Firemen benefited to the extent of being in first place by a half-game margin. Three teams in the league are virtually tied for top position, having each dropped but one game, but the Firemen have won one more game than either the D. T. C. Club or Harness Cigars, since the latter two teams have each had one contest called off on account of bad weather.

Harness Cigars meet strong opposition Friday night in Central High School and must win to tie the D. T. C. Club for second place. Harness defeated Central by one run the first round through a four-run rally in the ninth inning.

SHAGIN SEES PITTSBURGH TRAFFIC CONTROL

Peter Shagin, Xenia motorcycle policeman, who is spending his vacation on a good will tour of Eastern cities learning metropolitan traffic control methods, was photographed by International News Service for The Pittsburgh Sun-

Telegraph and The Gazette when he stopped in Pittsburgh.
Shagin is making his tour under auspices of the American Automobile Association and the Greene County Auto Club, and is attired in a special uniform created for his trip. He bears letters of introduction from City Manager S. O. Hale, Deliver Belden, auto club secretary and Carl Turner, district superintendent of International News Service.

CITY BUDGET CALLS FOR HIGHER TAX RATE; INCREASE 20 CENTS

The proposed 1929 budget for the City of Xenia, prepared by City Manager S. O. Hale and adopted by City Commission Thursday night, calls for $77,900, and increase of $3,650 over the amount allowed by the County Budget Commission for 1928.

This would mean a city tax rate of $5.70 per $1,000 property valuation, including $3.68 for operating expenses of city government next year and $2.02 for the interest and sinking fund.

The city is asking $50,300 for running expenses and $27,600 for the interest and sinking fund.

The present city tax rate is $5.50 per $1,000 property valuation, divided into $3.52 per $1,000 or $47.520 for operating expenses, and $1.98 per $1,000 or $26,730 for the interest and sinking fund.

The budget provides for elevating the city tax rate twenty-cents per $1,000 valuation, comparable with 1928.

Last year Manager Hale asked a city tax rate of $5.60 per $1,000, but the County Budget Commission later cut the rate ten cents to $5.50 for 1928.

Formation of what will be known as a "Civic Clearing House," composed of the presidents and secretaries of the various civic organizations of the city, was effected at a meeting at the Frances Inn Friday noon.

Temporary officers were elected with George Geyer selected as chairman and I. M. Hyman as secretary.

The next meeting will be held Friday noon, July 6 and an invitation will be extended to other similar organizations of Xenia to attend the session.

The Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, Xenia Retail Merchant's Association, Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club and The Downtown Country Club and representatives of the Friday organization meeting.

The purpose of the "Clearing House" will be to refer all matters of civic interest to proper organizations after they have been discussed, placing the questions in the right hands to be carried out.

The organization is something on the order of a Chamber of Commerce. Called meetings instead of regular meetings will be held when important civic matters command consideration.

Those attending the meeting were: Karl Babb, president, and T. H. Zell, secretary, of the Kiwanis Club; D. W. Cherry, president, and George Geyer, secretary, of the Rotary Club; Miss Elsie Causalby, president, and Miss Helen Graham, secretary, of the Xenia Business and Professional Women's Club; I. M. Hyman, pro and George Hult, steward, of the Downtown Country Club, and H. L. Binder, president of the Xenia Retail Merchant's Association.

Fishing Chats with The Old Angler

NUMBER THIRTEEN

Eventually there comes the time when every transient or camping devotee of sports affixed years for a more extensive base for hunting and fishing than can be secured by tenting trips or one-day hikes out from town or city home, and almost invariably this desire takes the form of a decision to build a rustic shack, camp or cabin deep in the forest.

About the time a highway is built available sites for summer cottages are quite often gobbled up by profiteers, who demand city foot front prices for a bit of rough land by lake or stream whereon the urban dweller seeks to erect lodge for self, party or family. Then the motorcaders are always stirring things up along the hard surface roads.

Today national forests are open in many states, and most every state owns extensive public forests. On these free tenting sites are provided, close to good fishing and hunting, and at a cost of $10 to $15 per year, with no taxes to pay. Any citizen can secure the lease of an acre or more for a permanent camp site, and as long as he obeys the laws, and pays the small rent, this is about as much his property as his town home.

He can tent, erect lodge or cabin as meager or as extensive as he desires. State and national forests are free recreation places for all the people.

EDITORS NOTE: This is one of a series of helpful hints to fishermen, appearing exclusively in the Gazette.

marketing of their products as the federal reserve board has done for the banker and business man.

President Coolidge was blamed for the Republicans' failure to offer a constructive program to restore equality to agriculture.

"While he has had no constructive and adequate program to offer in his stead, he has twice vetoed farm relief legislation and has sought to justify his disapproval of agriculture legislation partly on grounds wholly inconsistent with his acts making industrial monopolies the beneficiaries of government favor," it was declared.

Deception upon the farmer and stock raiser has been practiced by the Republican party through false and delusive promises for more than fifty years.

The tone of this language served notice the Democrats would make a strong bid for votes in the wheat and corn belts.

The Democratic attack on the administration was summed up in the blank, entitled "Republican corruption."

"Unbushy, the Republican party offers as its record agriculture prostrate, industry depressed, American shipping destroyed, workmen without employment; everywhere distrust and suspicion, and corruption unpunished and unafraid."

"Never in the entire history of the country has there occurred in any given period of time, or indeed, in all time put together, such a spectacle of sordid corruption and unabashed rascality as that which has characterized the administration of federal affairs under eight blighting years of Republican rule."

The high lights of other planks follow:

Economy and reorganization—"No economy resulted from the Republican party rule."

Finance and taxation—"We favor a further reduction of the internal taxes of the people."

Tariff—"Duties that will permit effective competition, insure against monopoly and at the same time produce a fair revenue for the support of government."

Mining—"It is the duty of our government to foster this industry and to remove the restrictions that destroy its prosperity."

Foreign policy—"The Republican administration has no foreign policy; it has drifted without plan. We declare for a constructive foreign policy based on these principles: outlawry of war, freedom from entangling political alliances with foreign nations."

"Interference in the purely internal affairs of Latin-American countries must cease."

"We condemn the Republican administration for lack of statesmanship and efficiency in negotiating the 1921 treaty for the limitation of armaments. In consequence, the race between nations in the building of unlimited weapons of destruction still goes on and the peoples of the world are still threatened with war and burdened with taxation for additional armament."

Water Power, Waterways and Flood Control—"We favor and will promote deep waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and to the Atlantic Ocean. We favor expeditious construction of flood relief works on the Mississippi and Colorado Rivers and such reclamation and irrigation projects upon the

"My fingers have never scratched the name of a Democrat who won the nomination."

It is harmony in the Democratic party just as the party planned. It is high oratory to hold a convention at 1 a. m. after it has had almost fourteen solid hours of previous high oratory in the torrid heat of Texas June. It is still higher oratory to hold a convention at 1 a. m. after that convention finished has nominated the man it has been struggling to nominate for eight lean years.

Reed took the convention merely with the muscle twitchings of his battle marked face. It was his before he uttered a line. The galleries remembered the last car and left reluctantly. The delegates remembered that this might be the last call to arms from Reed of Missouri and sat it out with roars of applause.

"If there is half as much activity in the Democratic party in November as there is on the floor now, the ticket selected by this convention is elected."

Reed is 69, but his terminology is the sharp, gripping, lashing language of eager young men serious in the business of conquering an inexorable world.

"I call upon every Democrat in the United States..." and now comes that smashing apoplectic gesture which brings the listener forward in his hot chair—"I call upon every Democrat in the United States, until the last ballot is counted on the night of the election, to support the nominee of this convention, and by such support to give protection against what I regard as the great menace to free government in my life time."

"In our great councils here we have reached a decision, and the thing for the Democratic party to do is to 'right dress,' forward march—and continue to march until the Republican party is driven from power. Its power is horrible, skillful and unscrupulous."

"Every difference we have with in the party sinks into insignificance beside the differences of our party and the Republican party."

And now you have a convention which has been whooping regularly since 10 a. m., lashed into a new maelstrom by the lone wolf who never did climb on to the Smith band wagon.

Reed called the roll of the sins of the Republican party from Grant to Coolidge, and then turned his hot lash upon Herbert Hoover.

"I fear for the destiny of our great country should a man of this background be elected to the presidency. If this country is to elect an Englishman to the presidency, I should prefer a thoroughbred Englishman from London rather than a renegade American."

And that, you may be sure, is a large whoop in a Democratic convention which has just nominated the fellow who began in Fulton Fish Market.

He denounced President Coolidge and all his cabinet in a blanket indictment charging indifference to the Teapot Dome revelations.

"They were as mum as a bunch of Boston oysters decaying on the beach in the month of August. When Grant discovered graft he said, 'Let none of the guilty escape.' Has anybody heard anything like that from Coolidge or from Mr. Hoover?"

He excoriated Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for formulating tax policies "which saved his own corporations nine millions of the ninety millions saved to the country" in the first Mellon tax reduction bill after the inauguration of President Harding.

Reverting to the Liberty bond transactions of the famous Continental Trading Company, part of which were contributed by Harry F. Sinclair to the Republican campaign deficit from 1920, Reed got around in a few sentences to the suggestion:

"I move that the movie industry be required to reinstate Fatty Arbuckle and require him to fire Will Hays."

Call it a swan song if you will. Jim Reed retires from the senate next March after fifty-one years of political life. He is going back to Kansas City to become a private citizen—to have, as he once told a colleague in the senate cloakroom, a whirlwind front porch campaign all of his own.

But if you saw Jim Reed under the Sam Houston klieg, you would call it a battle cry for Reed himself said so with a convincing smash of his open hand upon the speaker's table.

"I am standing today exactly where I stood then—when I was 18 years of age and entered my first campaign. I have never forsaken a great principle of the Democratic party."

Colorado River as may be found feasible."

Transportation—"Common carriers, whether by land, water or rail, must be protected in an equal opportunity to compete so that governmental regulations against exorbitant rates and inefficiency will be aided by competition."

Labor—"Labor is not a commodity. Human rights must be safeguarded. Labor should be exempt from the operations of the anti-trust laws. We recognize that legislative and other investigations have shown the existence of grave abuse in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes."

Veterans—"Generous appropriations, honest management, the removal of vexatious administration delays and sympathetic assistance for the veterans of all wars, is what the Democratic party demands."

Women and Children—"We declare for equality of women with men in all political and governmental matters."

Immigration—"Laws which limit immigration must be preserved in full force and effect, but the provisions contained in these laws that separate husbands and wives and parents from infant children are inhuman."

Campaign Expenditures—"We condemn the improper and excessive use of money in elections as a danger threatening the very existence of Democratic institutions."

"Honest business, no matter its size, need have no fears of a Democratic administration. The Democratic party will ever oppose illegitimate and dishonest business."

NEW YORK GOVERNOR SELECTED ON FIRST BALLOT AT HOUSTON

and sarcastically invited the movie magnates to "reinstate Fatty Arbuckle so he could fire Will Hays."

He stood there, the silver haired fiery Missourian, a loser at 69, but he faced it smilingly and with a plea for harmony. He had bitter words but they were for Republicans, not Democrats.

"My fingers," he said, "have never scratched a Democratic ticket. Since I was 18 I have supported the Democratic ticket in every campaign. I have voted for men who have been my personal enemies. I have supported platforms that were not to my liking. I call upon every Democrat in the United States, and I shall continue to call upon every Democrat until the last vote is counted on election day, to support the ticket."

And then after half an hour of exhorting the Republicans:

"Yonder is the enemy. Let Democrats march to the fray."

The fight over prohibition largely fizzled out in the final analysis. It had been the rock upon which it was predicted the convention would split—if it was to split at all.

In thirty-one words the prohibition issue was disposed of. They were these:

"This convention pledges the party and its nominees to an honest effort to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment and all other provisions of the Federal Constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

The dries were satisfied because it commits Governor Smith to rigid enforcement of the law by name; the wets were satisfied because it does not prevent the governor, in the event of his election, from recommending modification of the law. Such divergent opinion as those of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland and Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, were reconciled on this point, and both assured the convention of it.

The Smith people perhaps were better satisfied of the two.

"Governor Smith's views on prohibition are well known," said one of his leaders and he said one of his leaders to the present status of prohibition. He has his own platform on this point, irrespective of what the platform declares. Of course, he stands for law enforcement. All public officials do."

They were pleased because they believe the dry Democrats will look at the platform and be satisfied; they were pleased because they believed the wets, both Democratic and Republican, will look at Governor Smith and vote for him.

The official history won't record it, but when the roll call ended Governor Smith was barely short of the nomination. He had 724 2-3 votes as against the 733 1-3 necessary to nominate.

Ohio, which had cast her forty-eight votes for Atlee Pomerene on the first ballot, had an agreement with the Tammany leaders that if Ohio votes were needed at the conclusion of the roll call they would be forthcoming before the record could be announced. Scarcely had big Pat Halligan called and recorded two votes for Smith in the Virgin Islands then Ohio came to the front.

Forty-five of the Buckeye State's forty-eight votes were switched immediately and this sent Smith across with votes to spare. But the rumor of the band wagon was already rumbling. Half a dozen states, Indiana included, wanted to follow the Ohio example and it took half an hour for them all to get aboard.

Al Smith is in the driver's seat. Where he is going cannot be determined until the first Tuesday after the first Monday of next November.

DAYTON POWER AND LIGHT OFFERS NEW FRANCHISE TO CITY

charge is offset by the one cent reduction in the residential rate, from nine and one-half cents, including the discount, to eight and one-half cents.

It is estimated by officials of the companies that proposed decrease in the residential rate will average 1 1/2 per cent for consumers.

The projected reduction in the commercial rate varies but will average all the way up to 15 or 25 per cent, it is declared.

The present scale of charges for commercial lighting is ten cents per kilowatt hour for the first thirty hours of use of maximum demand, eight cents for the next 100 hours and six cents for all current in excess of 130 hours.

The new rate, if approved, means a reduction of two cents for the first thirty hours, one and one-fourth cents for the next 100 hours and one and three-fourths cents for in excess of 130 hours.

The commercial rate minimum charge is also boosted from fifty to seventy-five cents and the one-half cent delayed penalty attached, but this is not actually an increase providing payments are made promptly. The increased minimum charge would affect only the few people who use less than the minimum amount of electricity every month.

The present residential and commercial lighting rates have been charged since November 23, 1919, when the Dayton company was granted a ten-year franchise.

The company proposes to make the new rates effective one and one-half year in advance of the expiration of this franchise in order that the full benefit of the reduction may be received immediately. The proposed rates were presented for consideration by City Commission by E. H. Heathman, manager of the Xenia branch of the company, and J. C. Matthieu, Dayton, in charge of commercial activities.

Mr. Matthieu has been working on a reduced rate schedule for Xenia for the last six months and recently arrived at figures that are designed to prove satisfactory to both the company and consumers.

City Commission took the matter under advisement until its next meeting. Meanwhile it is planned to work out, if possible, a further rate reduction for the benefit of electric power consumers in residential districts.

The Dayton Power and Light Co., in presenting the new rate schedule, asked in return a ten-year franchise. The new rates would represent the maximum which would be charged during this period, but the company would retain the privilege of making further rate reductions if deemed possible.

Twin Ignition

HIGH COMPRESSION

MOTOR

12 Spark Plugs [Airplane Type] instead of 6

The new "Twin Ignition" motor, in the new Advanced and Special Nash "400" models, is a truly amazing development in power.

It is a high-compression motor, with two ignition coils, instead of one, two spark plugs per cylinder, instead of one, 360 sparks per second at top speed, instead of 180, to thoroughly and economically burn the highly-compressed gases.

It sets a precedent in motor-performance among all motor cars.

Nash "400" Advanced Six models are now capable of 75 to 80 miles per hour with no effort at all.

Nash "400" Special Six models do 70 to 75 with consummate ease.

Another major advantage of the "Twin Ignition" motor is economy—more power, more speed, less gasoline.

Drive a new Nash "400" and you'll see what Twin-Ignition and high compression have done to give the world a new and finer motor car.

marketing of their products as the federal reserve board has done for the banker and business man.

President Coolidge was blamed for the Republicans' "failure" to offer a constructive program to restore equality to agriculture.

"While he has had no constructive and adequate program to offer in his stead, he has twice vetoed farm relief legislation and has sought to justify his disapproval of agriculture legislation on grounds wholly inconsistent with his acts making industrial monopolies the beneficiaries of government favor," it was declared.

"Deception upon the farmer and stock raiser has been practiced by the Republican party through false and deceptive promises for more than fifty years."

The tone of this language served notice the Democrats would make a strong bid for votes in the wheat and corn belts.

The Democratic attack on the administration was summed up in the plank entitled "Republican corruption."

"Unbushy, the Republican party offers as its record agriculture prostrate, industry depressed, American shipping destroyed, workmen without employment; everywhere disgust and suspicion, and corruption unpunished and unabated."

"Never in the entire history of the country has there occurred in any given period of time, or indeed, in all time put together, such a spectacle of sordid corruption and unabashed rascality as that which has characterized the administration of federal affairs under eight brightening years of Republican rule."

The high lights of other planks follow:

Economy and reorganization—"No economy resulted from the Republican party rule."

Finance and taxation—"We favor a further reduction of the internal taxes of the people."

Tariff—"Duties that will permit effective competition, insure against monopoly and at the same time produce a fair revenue for the support of government."

Mining—"It is the duty of our government to foster this industry and to remove the restrictions that destroy its prosperity."

Foreign policy—"The Republican administration has no foreign policy; it has drifted without plan. We declare for a constructive foreign policy based on these principles: outlawry of war, freedom from entangling political alliances with foreign nations."

"Interference in the purely internal affairs of Latin-American countries must cease."

"We condemn the Republican administration for lack of statesmanship and efficiency in negotiating the 1921 treaty for the limitation of armaments. In consequence of the failure of nations in the building of unlimited weapons of destruction still goes on and the peoples of the world are still threatened with war and burdened with taxation for additional armaments."

Water Power, Waterways and Flood Control—"We favor and will promote deep waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and to the Atlantic Ocean. We favor expeditions construction of flood relief works on the Mississippi and Colorado Rivers and such reclamation and irrigation projects upon the never beaten.

"My fingers have never scratched the name of a Democrat who won the nomination."

It is harmony in the Democratic party just as the plan was planned.

It is high oratory to hold a convention at 1 p. m. after it has had almost fourteen solid hours of previous high oratory in the torrid heat of Texas June. It is still higher oratory to hold a convention at 1 a. m. after that convention finally has nominated the man it has been struggling to nominate for eight long years.

Reed took the convention merely with the muscle twitches of his battle marked face. It was his before he uttered a line. The galleries remembered the last car and left reluctantly. The delegates remembered that this might be the last call to arms from Reed of Missouri and sat it out with roars of applause.

"If there is half as much activity in the Democratic party in November as there is on the floor now, the ticket selected by this convention is elected."

Reed is 69, but his terminology is the sharp, gripping, lasting language of eager young men serious in the business of conquering an inexorable world.

"I call upon every Democrat in the United States..." and now comes that smashing apoplectic gesture which brings the listener forward in his hot chair. "I call upon every Democrat in the United States, until the last ballot is counted on the night of the election, to support the nominee of this convention, and by such support to give protection against what I regard as the great menace to free government in my life time."

"In our great councils here we have reached a decision, and the thing for the Democratic party to do is to 'right dress' forward march—and continue to march until the Republican party is driven from power. Its power is horrible, skillful and unscrupulous."

"Every difference we have with the party sinks into insignificance beside the differences of our party and the Republican party."

And now you have a convention which has been whooping regularly since 10 a. m., lashed into a new maelstrom by the lone wolf who never did climb on to the Smith band wagon.

Reed called the roll of the sins of the Republican party from Grant to Coolidge and then turned his hot lash upon Herbert Hoover.

"I fear for the destiny of our great country should a man of this background be elected to the presidency. If this country is to elect an Englishman to the presidency, I should prefer a thoroughbred Englishman from London rather than a renegade American."

And that, you may be sure, is a large whoop in a Democratic convention which has just nominated the fellow who began in Fulton Fish Market.

He denounced President Coolidge and all his cabinet in a blanket indictment charging indifference to the "Teapot Dome revelations."

"They were as much as a bunch of Boston oysters decaying on the beach in the month of August. When Grant discovered graft he said, 'Let none of the guilty escape.' Has anybody heard anything like that from Coolidge or from Mr. Hoover?"

He exhorted Secretary of the Treasury Mellon for formulating tax policies "which saved his own corporations nine millions of the ninety millions saved to the country" in the first Mellon tax reduction bill after the inauguration of President Harding.

Reverting to the Liberty bond transactions of the famous Continental Trading Company, part of which were contributed by Harry F. Sinclair to the Republican campaign deficit from 1920, Reed got around in a few sentences to the suggestion:

"I move that the movie industry be required to relocate Patty Arbuckle and require him to fire Will Hays."

Call it a swan song if you will. Jim Reed retires from the senate next March after fifty-one years of political life. He is going back to Kansas City to become a private citizen—to have, as he once told a colleague in the senate cloakroom, a whirlwind front porch campaign all of his own.

But if you saw Jim Reed under the Sam Houston klieg, you would call it a battle cry for Reed himself said so with a convincing smash of his open hand upon the speaker's table.

"I am standing today exactly where I stood there when I was 18 years of age and entered my first campaign. I have never forsaken a great principle of the Democratic party."

Colorado River as may be found feasible."

Transportation—"Common carriers, whether by land, water or rail, must be protected in an equal opportunity to compete so that governmental regulations against exorbitant rates and inefficiency will be added by competition."

Labor—"Labor is not a commodity. Human rights must be safeguarded. Labor should be exempt from the operations of the anti-trust laws. We recognize that legislative and other investigations have shown the existence of grave abuse in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes."

Veterans—"Generous appropriations, honest management, the removal of vexatious administration delays and sympathetic assistance for the veterans of all wars, is what the Democratic party demands."

Women and Children—"We declare for equality of women with men in all political and governmental matters."

Immigration—"Laws which limit immigration must be preserved in full force and effect, but the provisions contained in these laws that separate husbands and wives and parents from infant children are inhuman."

Campaign Expenditures—"We condemn the improper and excessive use of money in elections as a danger threatening the very existence of Democratic institutions."

Monopolies and Anti-Trust Laws—"Honest business, no matter its size, need have no fears of a Democratic administration. The Democratic party will ever oppose illegitimate and dishonest business."

NEW YORK GOVERNOR SELECTED ON FIRST BALLOT AT HOUSTON

and sarcastically invited the movie magnates to "relocate Patty Arbuckle so he could fire Will Hays."

He stood there, the silver haired fiery Missourian, a loser at 69, but he faced it smilingly and with a plea for harmony. He had bitter words but they were for Republicans, not Democrats.

"My fingers," he said, "have never scratched a Democratic ticket. Since I was 18 I have supported the Democratic ticket in every campaign. I have voted for men who have been my personal enemies. I have supported platforms that were not to my liking. I call upon every Democrat in the United States, and I shall continue to call upon every Democrat until the last vote is counted on election day, to support the ticket." And then after half an hour of exhorting the Republicans:

"Yonder is the enemy. Let Democrats marshal to the fray."

The fight over prohibition largely fizzled out in the final analysis. It had been the rock upon which it was predicted the convention would split—if it was to split at all.

In thirty-one words the prohibition issue was disposed of. They were these:

"This convention pledges the party and its nominees to an honest effort to enforce the Eighteenth Amendment and all other provisions of the Federal Constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

The dries were satisfied because it commits Governor Smith to rigid enforcement of the law by name; the wets were satisfied because it does not prevent the governor, in the event of his election, from recommending modification of the law. Such divergent opinion as those of Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, of Maryland and Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, were reconciled on this point, and both assured the convention of it.

The Smith people perhaps were better satisfied of the two.

Governor Smith's views on prohibition are well known. "He is opposed to the present status of prohibition. He has his own platform on this point, irrespective of what the platform declares. Of course, he stands for law enforcement. All public officials do."

They were pleased because they believe the dry Democrats will look at the platform and be satisfied; they were pleased because they believed the wets, both Democratic and Republican, will look at Governor Smith and vote for him.

The official history won't record it, but when the roll call ended Governor Smith was barely short of the nomination. He had 724 2/3 votes as against the 733 1/3 necessary to nominate.

Ohio, which had cast her forty-eight votes for Atlee Pomerene on the first ballot, had an agreement with the Tammany leaders that if Ohio votes were needed at the conclusion of the roll call they would be forthcoming before the result could be announced. Scarcely had big Pat Hattigan called and recorded two votes for Smith in the Virgin Islands then Ohio came to the front.

Forty-five of the Buckeye State's forty-eight votes were switched immediately and this sent Smith across with votes to spare. But the rumor of the band wagon was already rumbling. Half a dozen states, Indiana included, wanted to follow the Ohio example and it took half an hour for them all to get aboard.

Al Smith is in the driver's seat. Where he is going cannot be determined until the first Tuesday after the first Monday of next November.

DAYTON POWER AND LIGHT OFFERS NEW FRANCHISE TO CITY

charge is offset by the one cent reduction in the residential rate, from nine and one-half cents, including the discount, to eight and one-half cents.

It is estimated by officials of the companies that proposed decrease in the residential rate will average 1 1/2 per cent for consumers.

The projected reduction in the commercial rate varies but will average all the way up to 15 or 25 per cent, it is declared.

The present scale of charges for commercial lighting is ten cents per kilowatt hour for the first thirty hours use of maximum demand, eight cents for the next 100 hours and six cents for all current in excess of 130 hours.

The new rate, if approved, means a reduction of two cents for the first thirty hours, and one and one-fourth cents for the next 100 hours, and one and three-fourths cents for in excess of 130 hours.

The commercial rate minimum charge is also boosted from fifty to seventy-five cents and the one-half cent delayed penalty attached, but this is not actually an increase providing payments are made promptly. The increased minimum charge would affect only the few people who use less than the minimum amount of electricity every month.

The present residential and commercial lighting rates have been charged since November 29, 1919, when the Dayton company was granted a ten-year franchise.

The company proposes to make the new rates effective one and one-half year in advance of the expiration of this franchise in order that the full benefit of the reduction may be received immediately. The proposed rates were presented for consideration by City Commission by E. H. Heathman, manager of the Xenia branch of the company, and J. C. Matthieu, Dayton, in charge of commercial activities.

Mr. Matthieu has been working on a reduced rate schedule for Xenia for the last six months and recently arrived at figures that are designed to prove satisfactory to both the company and consumers.

City Commission took the matter under advisement until its next meeting. Meanwhile it is planned to work out, if possible, a further rate reduction for the benefit of electric power consumers in residential districts.

The Dayton Power and Light Co., in presenting the new rate schedule, asked in return a ten-year franchise. The new rates would represent the maximum which would be charged during this period, but the company would retain the privilege of making further rate reductions if deemed possible.

Twin Ignition
HIGH COMPRESSION
MOTOR
12 Spark Plugs [Airplane Type] instead of 6

The new "Twin Ignition" motor, in the new Advanced and Special Nash "400" models, is a truly amazing development in power.

It is a high-compression motor, with two ignition coils, instead of one, two spark plugs per cylinder, instead of one, 360 sparks per second at top speed, instead of 180, to thoroughly and economically burn the highly-compressed gases.

It sets a precedent in motor-performance among all motor cars.

Nash "400" Advanced Six models are now capable of 75 to 80 miles per hour with no effort at all.

Nash "400" Special Six models do 70 to 75 with consummate ease.

Another major advantage of the "Twin Ignition" motor is economy—more power, more speed, less gasoline.

Drive a new Nash "400" and you'll see what Twin-Ignition and high compression have done to give the world a new and finer motor car.

MRS. J. V. FRANKLIN OF FRANKLIN, OHIO

Tells of terrible suffering for years. "I have suffered from stomach trouble, pain across my back, headache, tired worn-out feeling, would bloat, had smothering spells so I could hardly get my breath, I was so weak that I could hardly carry a chair from my front room to the porch. I doctored all the while, but it seemed I got weaker all the time. I became discouraged. I felt that I never would enjoy good health again." While talking to a friend one day she told me what wonderful results she had obtained from Ju-Vo and insisted that I give Ju-Vo a trial, which I did. Before finishing the first bottle, I began to feel better. I continued to take Ju-Vo, and I can now proudly say I am entirely well. Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The work of caring for the needy widows made necessary the selection of helpers that the apostles might give more time to preaching and so Stephen with six others were called as deacons for this task. But Peter preached at every opportunity and became a real assistant in the church.

V. 54. "Now when they heard these things, they were out to the heart and they gnashed on him with their teeth." Stephen, in his sermon, declared that devotion to the law in all details had made them unfaithful followers of Christ and that charge caused violent resentment.

V. 55. "But he being full of the Holy Spirit, looked up steadfastly into Heaven and saw the glory of God." It is not enough to believe; every one believes in a manner; the only equipment for a Christian warfare is to be full of the Holy Spirit.

V. 56. "And said, behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." Stephen's upward look revealed the waiting Lord; his safety was guaranteed for he was sure of the divine presence, as the veil parted, he saw the Master.

Vs. 57, 58. "But they cried with a loud voice and stopped their ears and rushed upon him with one accord; and they cast him out of the city and stoned him; and the witnesses laid down their garments at the feet of a young man named Saul." When men are guilty of sin and justly condemned, they will either repent or become hardened and more pronounced in their wrong doing. Every sermon men hear makes them better or worse.

V. 59. "And they stoned Stephen, calling upon the Lord, and saying, Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." Stephen needed the Lord and he was not far away; we are never out of prayer-touch with him who answers prayer. Nor does the buffeted soul cry to him in vain.

V. 60. "And he kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.' And when he had said this, he fell asleep. Stephen had served the Lord in life and he now rested the Lord implicitly and could claim the promise of going to be with Jesus forevermore. Death is like a sleep becoming unconscious to this world and the great commission of the world 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel' was inaugurated.

"And I also was standing by and consenting." In later years Paul referred to this persecution as an occasion when the gospel of Christ was made efficient among men.

Discussion on S.S. Lesson

1. How did Stephen come to be elected deacon?
2. How much of the customs of Moses yet remained?
3. What value, if any, is there in persecution?
4. Paul followed his conscience; how far is conscience a safe guide?
5. What type of persecution is seen in our republic?
6. How put down error without resorting to physical force?
7. What are the perils of free speech guaranteed by our country and how may these perils be averted?

Clericus says, "The light that radiated from Stephen when persecuted so effected Paul that in a few years he saw the great light from Heaven and became a flaming angel; good men die but their influence never dies and in that influence God works wonders."

Lesson Prayer. O Lord, we would be bold to speak the truth concerning Thee and Thy love; we would be so heroic as to face death if need be that Thy cause and kingdom might become a reality among men.

1. Suggest ways of making the social life of the adult Bible class more purposeful. To know each other better is essential for the highest type of fellowship and service; men will know each other better as they play together, hence the place and function of games and sports adapted to adult life; there will be need of get-together social meetings well planned, providing unrestricted expressions of fellowship. The program of social evening should be rich and varied; the social committee ought to build up a library of plans and methods, ways and means of making a success of the social evening. The special needs of the community should be kept before the class and these needs met by definite plans; here will be found many meritorious purposes.

2. Why should the church foster recreational programs for the youth? First, it is necessary to use the free time of youth in a constructive fashion. They enjoy recreation more than anything else and it helps to develop habits and attitudes of fair play and good sportsmanship needed through life. Secondly, religion is for all of life and since the play life is natural, the church must insure good moral leadership and unless the church furnishes right leaders, the youth will follow leaders possible not so good morally and are it is known, the youth is led away from Christ and the church.

A Message to Octogenarians
Often the aged are neglected and they feel it more than is known. Sometimes they magnify their age with its handicaps and live in a state of bemoaning. Far be it from us to give them advice but a word from Dr. F. B. Meyer, a world renowned London preacher soon eighty years of age, is worth heeding.

Dr. Meyer says, "As to the old people who are entering their eightieth year, I would say, 'Don't allow yourself to feel old; don't give up your interest in life; cultivate a hobby; have a game now and then with your grandchildren, or some one else; don't think about the end—God has lovingly planned that you will be as unaware of your passing out as you were of your coming in. I take it for granted, of course, that you have entrusted yourself to Christ for time and eternity.'"

THE BETTER WAY THE HEALING OF THE NATIONS

My brother had his leg broken when a boy, by the kicking of a horse; the broken bones refused to heal; every day the doctor would come and by grasping the ends of the bone he would move them back and forth until they became sore, after which the healing process began. The daily visit by the doctor was dreaded, for it meant excruciating pain, but it was the way of suffering to effect the needed healing.

The great World War produced broken bones, broken hearts and broken nations; daily the soldier boys of different nations were painfully jostled about; they rubbed together in camps, in dugouts, in trenches on land and sea in all forms of army and navy life. We had often talked "world brotherhood" but nothing has produced it like the suffering and death of the "liddle boys" of the world. World heroes sleep together in the cemeteries of Flanders Fields. Those who survive are thinking in terms of world peace. The untold suffering of the World War has been for the healing of the nations.

Creamed Comments On S.S. Lesson

The work of caring for the needy widows made necessary the selection of helpers that the apostles might give more time to preaching and so Stephen with six others were called as deacons for this task. But Peter preached at every opportunity and became a real assistant in the church.

V. 54. "Now when they heard these things, they were out to the heart and they gnashed on him with their teeth." Stephen, in his sermon, declared that devotion to the law in all details had made them unfaithful followers of Christ and that charge caused violent resentment.

V. 55. "But he being full of the Holy Spirit, looked up steadfastly into Heaven and saw the glory of God." It is not enough to believe; every one believes in a manner; the only equipment for a Christian warfare is to be full of the Holy Spirit.

V. 56. "And said, behold, I see the heavens opened, and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God." Stephen's upward look revealed the waiting Lord; his safety was guaranteed for he was sure of the divine presence; as the veil parted, he saw the Master.

Vs. 57, 58. "But they cried with a loud voice and stopped their ears and rushed upon him with one accord; and they cast him out of the city and stoned him; and the witnesses laid down their garments at the feet of a young man named Saul." When men are guilty of sin and justly condemned, they will either repent or become hardened and more pronounced in their wrong doing. Every sermon men hear makes them better or worse.

V. 59. "And they stoned Stephen, calling upon the Lord, and saying, Lord Jesus receive my spirit." Stephen needed the Lord and he was not far away; we are never out of prayer-touch with him who answers prayer. Nor does the buffetted soul cry to him in vain.

V. 60. "And he kneeled down and cried with a loud voice, 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.' And when he had said this, he fell asleep." Stephen had served the Lord implicitly and could claim the promise of going to be with Jesus forevermore. Death is like a sleep becoming unconscious to this world and then becoming conscious again in another world. The prayer of forgiveness is a sign of one's acceptance with the Lord.

Acts 8:1. "And there arose on that day a great persecution against the church which was in Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judea and Samaria, except the apostles." In this persecution the great commission of the world "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel" was inaugurated.

"And I also was standing by and consenting." In later years Paul referred to this persecution as an occasion when the gospel of Christ was made efficient among men.

Discussion on S.S. Lesson

1. How did Stephen come to be elected deacon?
2. How much of the customs of Moses yet remained?
3. What value, if any, is there in persecution?
4. Paul followed his conscience; how far is conscience a safe guide?
5. What type of persecution is seen in our republic?
6. How put down error without resorting to physical force?
7. What are the perils of free speech guaranteed by our country and how may these perils be averted?

Clericus says, "The light that radiated from Stephen when persecuted so affected Paul that in a few years he saw the great light from Heaven and became a flaming angel; good men die but their influence never dies and in that influence God works wonders."

Lesson. "O Lord, we would be bold to speak the truth concerning Thee and Thy love; we would be so heroic as to face death if need be that thy cause and kingdom might become a reality among men."

Church Forum

1. SUGGEST VOICES of making the social life of the adult Bible class more purposeful. To know each other better is essential for the highest type of fellowship and service; men will know each other better as they play together, hence the place and function of games and sports adapted to adult life; there will be need of getting-together social meetings well planned, providing unrestricted expressions of fellowship. The program of social evening should be rich and varied; the social committee ought to build up a library of plans and methods, ways and means of making a success of the social evening. The special needs of the community should be kept before the class and these needs met by definite plans; here will be found many meritorious purposes.

2. Why should the church foster recreational programs for the youth? First, it is necessary to use the free time of youth in a constructive fashion. They enjoy recreation more than anything else and it helps to develop habits and attitudes of fair play and good sportsmanship needed through life. Secondly, religion is for all of life and since the play life is natural, the church must needs enter that field. The church insures good moral leadership and unless the church furnishes right leaders, the youth will follow leaders possible not so good morally and ere it is known, the youth is lead away from Christ and the church.

World Religious News

Mr. Julius Rosenwald, well-known benefactor and philanthropist has recently added $2,000,000 to the fund he created some time ago for benevolent purposes, the fund now totalling $22,000,000. Mr. Rosenwald specifies that this fund must be spent within twenty-five years of his death, so that it may benefit his contemporaries rather than coming generations.

The committee of the Advisory Council of the National Broadcasting Company will soon inaugurate as a part of the "University of the Air" a special series entitled "Great Messages of Religion" to be given to a wide hook-up on a week-day evening each week by nationally known speakers representing the Roman Catholic, Jewish and Protestant faiths.

A Message to Octogenarians
Often the aged are neglected and they feel it more than is known. Sometimes they magnify their age with its handicaps and live in a state of bemoaning. Far be it from us to give them advice but a word from Dr. F. B. Meyer, a world-renowned London preacher soon eighty years of age, is worth heeding.

Dr. Meyer says, "As to the old people who are entering their eightieth year, I would say, 'Don't allow yourself to feel old; don't give up your interest in life; cultivate a hobby; have a game now and then with your grandchildren, or some one else; don't think about the end; God has lovingly planned that you will be as unaware of your passing as you were of your coming in. I take it for granted, of course, that you have entrusted yourself to Christ for time and eternity.'"

"My outlook for the next world is summed up in the words, 'His servants shall serve him.' In his service there is perfect freedom."

The Church Invites You

A SEARCHING QUESTION ON WORSHIP

"You can worship God in many places, but do you worship outside the public service of worship? You can worship on the golf course, but you don't; on the lake fishing but you don't; in your home on Sunday but you don't."

"You can worship driving in an auto mobile, but you don't, in your lodge, but you don't; by sending your children to church, but you don't; by paying liberally to the church, but you don't; by being in a different church each Sunday but you don't."

Those who really worship God select a church and attend its services faithfully: why not accept the invitation and COME TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?—D. Carl Yoder.

THE BETTER WAY

THE HEALING OF THE NATIONS

My brother had his leg broken when a boy, by the kicking of a horse; the broken bones refused to heal; every day the doctor would come and by grasping the ends of the bone he would move them back and forth until they became sore, after which the healing process began. The daily visit by the doctor was dreaded, for it meant excruciating pain, but it was the way of suffering to effect the needed healing.

The great World War produced broken bones, broken hearts and broken nations; daily the soldier boys of different nations were painfully jostled about; they rubbed together in camps, in dugouts, in trenches on land and sea in all forms of army and navy life. We had often talked "world brotherhood" but nothing has produced it like the suffering and death of the "liddle boys" of the world. World heroes sleep together in the cemeteries of Flanders Fields. The World And All

BY CHARLES B. DRISCOLL

THESE CONVENTIONS

What surprises me about conventions of political parties is that people seem to take them so seriously. Now, I have attended a good many of them, and I think they're fine. I hate to miss one. But I can't see any occasion for puckering one's brow about them, quarreling about them, or leaning forward breathlessly to catch the words of the keynote.

As Kansas City a very serious looking man with gray hair and mustache made one of the speeches. Oh, he made all of them, I guess. All speakers at national political conventions have gray hair and neat gray mustaches, or if they haven't they should have. The speaker at conventions is a type. He is gifted in the field of mock-herosies. He can say the most ordinary things with the air of finality and wisdom that one might paint into the face of Moses when the tablets of the law were being presented to the public for the first time.

Now, I feel sure that conventions will have to have a lot of modern improvements attached to them in the years just ahead. I have suggested heretofore that a good Broadway chorus and some tight-wire walkers ought to be added to the show, for entertainment of the audiences during the long speeches. But other improvements can be devised very easily. With the improvement of the talking movies, I am sure a great deal of the labor of conventioning can be saved.

A talking movie can make the serious speeches. The picture can be made to look even more serious than the typical talking politician. And the picture won't have to sweat so much.

In fact, a tiny bit of faking can be resorted to. You won't have to photograph a man at all. You can photograph a concrete pillar in a thoughtful pose, and then have the speech made by the machine while the pillar is flashed on the screen in place of the speaker. That would be very impressive for keynote speeches and nominating addresses.

I hesitate to put forward such a proposition, because I know that both political parties are against faking. But we have got to do something to make these conventions more impressive. The audiences are getting wise.

READ THIS FIRST:

Ackland Center, a little old town in New England, is proud of its beauty and traditions. But the modern world crowds in on its peace and quiet. Finally a notorious roadhouse, Jazland, is opened by a gang of bootleggers. Liquor flows. Girls of the town are lured there. The editor of the "Weekly Age" is murdered or his editorial attacks. His brother, Homer Pew, takes up the fight. Homer is joined by Stella Bagot, one of the home-town girls, who has made good as a writer in New York. Stella comes to write a story, and remains to fight Jazland. Homer is beaten up in a mysterious midnight attack. Stella takes charge of the paper and writes sizzling editorials. She also tries to track down the murderer. Stella finds her little sister, Martha, has been out on a lark to Jazland, and has been drinking. She gives her lecture and Martha complains that she is kept at home while Stella has been allowed to go to college and later take up her own life in New York. Stella returns to her room, and leaves a note pinned on her door telling her mother to awaken her early the next morning.

Stella has made an appointment to phone Ernie Hallam, a New York admirer, who is staying in Boston.

Ernie complains that Stella has forgotten him, but she makes a date to meet him in a little room nearby that night at six-thirty. Ernie is very much in love with Stella.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

Harmer engineered the whole transaction. Acting through Harkey, he bought both the Harkey and Parmenter properties and sold the Parmenter place to Horwitz and Nedrick. He had been approached by their lawyer in the matter of securing a victualer's license as a sort of guarantee of good faith on the part of the selectmen.

"That bears out your suspicions, Stella," said Homer. "Hm! So old Joe is tangled up with those birds, eh?"

Not exactly. It isn't simple. And my information isn't complete. He paid something like sixteen thousand dollars for the two properties, and sold them for twenty-eight thousand, five hundred."

"Twelve thousand, five hundred by way of profit, eh?"

"Yes. He did very well. Understand, he doesn't appear anywhere in the transaction. He worked through Harkey. But after he got himself rather nicely involved, there appears to have been a catch. It was to have been a cash transaction. But Nedrick and Horwitz refused to pay in full. I haven't the exact figures, but think they put up in the neighborhood of thirty-five or forty per cent. Something like seventeen thousand dollars is still owing to Mr. Harmer."

"Good Lord!" muttered Homer. "That nearly makes him a partner of those queer birds, doesn't it?"

"Not quite. Their only hope of real protection lay in drawing him in. They tempted him with a neat profit. As soon as he committed himself, they had him. They just put on the screws. He couldn't give them the bank and exposing the whole transaction. So he simply took their notes, and is keeping them in his personal safe at home."

"Why doesn't that make him a partner?"

"Because he isn't in business with them. He is outside, holding the bag. But he's got to protect them until they pay off the notes or he'll lose money. And Mr. Harmer doesn't like to lose money. He doesn't do business that way. There are several notes, maturing at different periods. I haven't been able to learn the dates or the exact amounts."

"Look here!" exclaimed Homer. "We've got him where we want him!"

"Oh, no we haven't!"

"But we only need to expose these facts to the town to win."

"Wait a minute, Mr. Pew! We're still a long way from having a case that would stand up in court. I am counting on you and Miss Bagot to co-operate with me."

"But good God! Don't you see? He has a financial stake in the place. He is involved! Even after that damnable murder he goes on protecting the scoundrels! Covering up! Why?"

"Wait! Wait! Please, Mr. Pew! You must understand that while I've been able to develop several sources of information, very little of what I've picked up so far is in the form of legal evidence. Probably the persons who have given up a little could be easily frightened into swearing just the opposite in court. I haven't those notes, or even a photostatic copy of them. I haven't even a letter."

"Joe Harmer doesn't write letters. Look here, you'll admit that we could easily get him on the run?"

"I'm not at all sure that we could."

"I think," Stella remarked, thoughtfully, "that I see what Mr. Wilberham means. Mr. Harmer is in something of a fix. He doesn't want to lose his money. And he doesn't want the fact that he's tied up with Jazland exposed to the town. But even if it were, it would take a good deal of exposing to turn people here actually against him."

"Exactly." The detective flashed a keen glance at her. "Let me try and picture his situation as I see it. In the first place, he is a very strong figure, not only in the town here, but in the county. Even, modestly, in the state. People respect his character and his judgment, and they think a lot of his family background. He is quite a force politically. He has been a member of the state committee of his party, a delegate to national conventions, all that sort of thing. And it means a lot. More, perhaps, than you realize. Most of the men who hold high political office in the state are old friends of his. If we were to attack him, even on the basis of a little real evidence, we'd be swamped with counterattacks."

"But—but—" Homer sputtered like an excited boy. "here he is, crookedly involved in putting over that Jazland place on the town."

"No, Mr. Pew, he isn't crookedly involved."

"We've got to try to look at it with the eyes of the average man. In the first place, we haven't a scrap of evidence against Jazland."

"What everybody knows—" "What everybody knows is not evidence. Before the law that roadhouse is a legitimate restaurant."

"I'm glad that you understand, Miss Bagot."

Homer was still pacing about. Suddenly he whirled on the detective. "We know," he said, "that Jazland is tied up with the liquor ring."

"We think so."

"Damn it, we know."

"We haven't the evidence. And real evidence isn't easy to get."

"See here, is Billy Wykeham protecting the place?"

"I really can't go into that, Mr. Pew. It is a complicated situation."

Exclusive Central Press Dispatch To The Gazette

HICAGO, June 21—Jungle fairs better in Chicago than in any other American city. Their cultural advantages are legion and they get the best of hotel accommodations. Out in the Wilson Ave. district is an academy for parrots from exclusive South American jungle families.

The school, which has just celebrated its twenty-third anniversary, registered this year 500 parrots. The feathered students are taught to speak Spanish and English. The brightest ones learn to talk, whistle, sing a bit and cough, all within four months.

The Lincoln Park zoo has a bird hotel that is right up-to-date. Not long ago a British naturalist stopped over in Chicago for ten days, accompanied by his pet hawk. The hawk, "Sligo," was registered at the hotel, took a bath after his long journey, ate a porterhouse steak for breakfast, and enjoyed the comforts of the hotel during his stay in the city. He was given a private room.

Two vultures came to the zoo not long ago for an indefinite stay. They refused to eat from "post mortem" menus. Six boys from the Lincoln Park vicinity organized a "Snake Catering company," and during the cultures' visit sold the zoo grass and garden snakes at so much a head.

Domestic animals are well taken care of, too. A cat maternity and surgical hospital has recently been established, and Mrs. Irene Castle McLaughlin is founding a home for mad dogs and stray canines.

Chicago's "enfant terribles," the ones that thrive in hotel kitchenette apartments, aren't too blasé to get a thrill out of elevator joy riding. I'll say, Barbara Ann's mother is quite a club woman. So, three times a week in the afternoons she hires a nursemaid by the hour to come in to look after the child. The other day Barbara Ann slipped out of the room, soon after the nurse arrived, locked the door, and then amused herself until the nurse could get the desk clerk on the phone, by riding up and down in the self-running elevator.

Kentucky seems to have come to Chicago for its newest cologne. The governor of that state recently selected Charles A. Seger, managing editor of the Chicago Evening Post, for that commission, when he was at the Kentucky Derby, as aid to the governor's staff.

FELT MISERABLE ALL OVER BEFORE TAKING KONJOLA

Local Man Says New Medicine Built Up His Run-down System.

Twenty-two different roots and herbs combined with other renowned medical ingredients, go into the making of this new Konjola medicine. Sufferers from every section of Xenia are praising this compound after it relieved them of disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Stubborn cases of rheumatism and neuritis have been ended. The Konjola Man is personally explaining the merits of this new medicine to vast crowds of people, and at the time, many well known men and women are strongly endorsing this remedy. For instance just a few days ago Mr. A. H. Caplinger, 564 Cincinnati Avenue, Xenia, made the following statement to the Konjola Man who is at the Galaher Drug Store, this city:

"Before taking Konjola I suffered from various ailments for many years," said Caplinger, "and I really didn't think it was possible for one medicine to restore my health like Konjola did."

"My health was in a general run-down condition and no matter what I would do for it, I still seemed to be dragging through life, half sick all the time. My stomach was in a terrible shape. Every meal I ate caused intense suffering in the pit of my stomach. The gas which used to form would rise into my throat and mouth making it very unpleasant for me. I would sometimes be attacked with awful belching spells when bits of undigested food would come up making it hard to keep anything that I ate on my stomach. I was awfully constipated and poisons filled my system so that I felt tired and worn out all day long. At nights I couldn't rest well but would toss back and forth on the bed for hours before going to sleep. I was in this condition for almost a year, and was getting discouraged."

"I heard of Konjola through a friend and made up my mind to try this medicine. It's a blessing that I did for this medicine is just what I always needed. I have taken but three bottles of Konjola but it has made me feel better than I have in years. My appetite is wonderful now and I can sit down and eat whatever is placed before me, without thought of after effects. The gas never forms now and the belching spells that used to come over me are permanently ended. I never have to take any kind of laxative because Konjola cleansed my whole inner-system. In fact, I feel fine in every way and it is all due to my taking Konjola. I am glad to endorse your medicine because I know what it will do and think it should be used by everyone troubled as I was."

The Konjola Man is at the Galaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

Especially Written for Central Press and The Gazette

William Jennings Bryan at the time he ran against William McKinley was one of the handsomest young men in the public eye. His face, of very regular features, shone with a radiant enthusiasm of which the disappointments of his later years robbed him.

When he made his great campaign on the Democratic ticket in favor of free silver, accompanied by his wife, his elegance and good looks and personality made many a voter say to himself while listening to him, "Almost thou persuadest me."

Bouquets for Mrs. Bryan This was Bryan's great misfortune. He was almost, but never quite, persuaded by his hearers. In one of the larger towns in Ohio, a number of Democratic women arranged a reception for Mrs. Bryan.

At that time, for a politician's wife to accompany him on a speaking tour was an innovation and wherever she went she was the recipient of much attention and usually a profusion of flowers.

It was at the beginning of the fashion of using bouquets and baskets of flowers with gorgeous ribbons, and at her reception, each cluster of blossoms seemed to have more and richer ribbon tied around it than the last. I happened to be standing near Mrs. Bryan as messengers and admitters presented baskets and boxes tied with every conceivable color and kind that could be imagined were presented to her, and suggested that I would find some vases for the flowers.

Ribbons for Daughter "Never mind," she answered, "there will be a relay of fresh ones tomorrow." Then she dropped the last bunch of blossoms carelessly on the table before her.

While she was talking she was carefully taking off the ribbons, however, rolling them around her fingers and laying them aside.

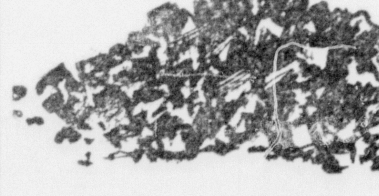

"Do you always receive as many flowers as this," I asked, "and are they always tied with such gorgeous ribbons?"

"Perhaps not," she answered, "but I wrote my daughter this morning that regardless of whether her father was elected the next president of the United States or not, she would have hair ribbons enough to last her all her life."

Of course at that time Mrs. Bryan could not know that the theories of her husband, as well as the practice of wearing hair ribbons, would go out of fashion.

FATHER O'CONNOR TO DEDICATE SHRINE TO ST. CHRISTOPHER

A shrine to St. Christopher the "Christ-bearer" will be dedicated Sunday at St. Vincent de Paul Church, Cincinnati, by Archbishop John T. McNicholas.

The shrine is the idea of the Rev. William P. O'Connor, pastor of the church, former pastor of St. Augustine's Church, Jamestown, and former national chaplain of the American Legion. On his visit to the Legion convention at Paris, France, last year the Rev. Father O'Connor found that his idea had won widespread comment and approval in that country.

A Carrara marble statue of St. Christopher was purchased by the Rev. Father O'Connor in Pisa, Italy, for the shrine. St. Christopher medals are used by autoists and travelers and the shrine will have especial significance to them. The legend of St. Christopher follows:

Offerus, a strong man of the third century, was urged by a hermit, Babylus, to enter the service of Christ. To help his fellowmen Offerus lived on the bank of a turbulent stream and ferried travelers across on his shoulders. However, he would not pray nor fast and doubted the Christian beliefs. One day there came a child and Offerus began to carry him across the river. In midstream he found the child growing heavier and he exclaimed: "Had I borne the whole world on my shoulders it could not have been heavier than thou." Pressing on, he reached the opposite bank, when he was astonished to hear the child say: "Marvel not, for thou has borne upon thy shoulders not only the world, but Him who created it." Offerus refused to believe, but the child, to dispel his doubts, bade him drive his staff into the earth and it took root, leaved and bore fruit within the space of a day. Offerus then believed and telling his story to the hermit was baptized and henceforth was called Christopher, meaning Christ-bearer. He became so great a preacher and converted so many, that the ruler of the kingdom persecuted him, finally putting him to death with torture.

VISITING MINISTER WILL PREACH HERE

The Rev. J. W. Touriss, Salisbury N. C., will preach Sunday evening at 7:30 at the Church of the Nazarene, Orange St., and Beilbrook Ave.

The other services of the church will be held as usual. The public is cordially invited to attend all the services of the church.

FELT MISERABLE ALL OVER BEFORE TAKING KONJOLA

Local Man Says New Medicine Built Up His Run-down System.

Twenty-two different roots and herbs combined with other recognized medicinal ingredients, go into the making of this new Konjola medicine. Sufferers from every section of Xenia are praising this compound after it relieved them of disorders of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Stubborn cases of rheumatism and neuritis have been ended. The Konjola Man is personally explaining the merits of this new medicine to vast crowds of people, and at the time, many well known men and women are strongly endorsing this remedy. For instance just a few days ago Mr. A. H. Caplinger, 504 Cincinnati Avenue, Xenia, made the following statement to the Konjola Man who is at the Gallaher Drug Store, this city:

"Before taking Konjola I suffered from various ailments for many years," said Caplinger, "and I really didn't think it was possible for one medicine to restore my health like Konjola did."

"My health was in a general run-down condition and no matter what I would do for it, I still seemed to be dragging through life, half sick all the time. My stomach was in a terrible shape. Every meal I ate caused intense suffering in the pit of my stomach. The gas which used to form would rise into my throat and mouth making it very unpleasant for me. I would sometimes be attacked with awful belching spells when bits of undigested food would come up making it hard to keep anything that I ate on my stomach. I was awfully constipated and poisons filled my system so that I felt tired and worn out all day long. At nights I couldn't rest well but would toss back and forth on the bed for hours before going to sleep. I was in this condition for almost a year, and was getting discouraged."

"I heard of Konjola through a friend and made up my mind to try this medicine. It's a blessing that I did for this medicine is just what I always needed. I have taken but three bottles of Konjola but it has made me feel better than I have in years. My appetite is wonderful now and I can sit down and eat whatever is placed before me, without thought of after effects. The gas never forms now and the belching spells that used to come over me are permanently ended. I never have to take any kind of laxative because Konjola cleansed my whole inner-system. In fact, I feel fine in every way and it is all due to my taking Konjola. I am glad to endorse your medicine because I know what it will do and think it should be used by everyone troubled as I was."

The Konjola Man is at the Gallaher Drug Store, Xenia, where he is daily meeting the public and introducing and explaining the merits of this remedy. Free samples given.

Especially Written for Central Press and The Gazette

William Jennings Bryan at the time he ran against William McKinley was one of the handsomest young men in the public eye. His face, of very regular features, shone with a radiant enthusiasm of which the disappointments of his later years robbed him.

When he made his great campaign on the Democratic ticket in favor of free silver, accompanied by his wife, his elegance and good looks and personality made many a voter say to himself while listening to him, "Almost thou persuadest me."

Bouquets for Mrs. Bryan. This was Bryan's great misfortune. He was almost, but never quite, persuaded by his hearers. In one of the larger towns in Ohio, a number of Democratic women arranged a reception for Mrs. Bryan.

At that time, for a politician's wife to accompany him on a speaking tour was an innovation and wherever she went, she was the recipient of much attention and usually a profusion of flowers.

It was at the beginning of the fashion of tying bouquets and baskets of flowers, with gorgeous ribbons, and at her reception, each cluster of blossoms seemed to have more and richer ribbons tied around it than the last. I happened to be standing near Mrs. Bryan as messengers and admirers presented baskets and boxes tied with every conceivable color and kind that could be imagined were presented to her, and suggested that I would find some vases for the flowers.

"Never mind," she answered, "there will be a relay of fresh ones tomorrow." Then she dropped the last bunch of blossoms carelessly on the table before her.

While she was talking she was carefully taking off the ribbons, however, rolling them around her fingers and laying them aside.

"Do you always receive as many flowers as this?" I asked, "and are they always tied with such gorgeous ribbons?"

"Perhaps not," she answered, "but I wrote my daughter this morning that regardless of whether her father was elected the next president of the United States or not, she would have hair ribbons enough to last her all her life. Of course at that time Mrs. Bryan could not know that the theories of her husband, as well as the practice of wearing hair ribbons, would go out of fashion."

FATHER O'CONNOR TO DEDICATE SHRINE TO ST. CHRISTOPHER

A shrine to St. Christopher the "Christ-bearer" will be dedicated Sunday at St. Vincent de Paul Church, Cincinnati, by Archbishop John T. McNicholas.

The shrine is the idea of the Rev. William P. O'Connor, pastor of the church, former pastor of St. Augustine's Church, Jamestown, and former national chaplain of the American Legion. On his visit to the Legion convention at Paris, France, last year the Rev. Father O'Connor found that his idea had won widespread comment and approval in that country.

A Cararra marble statue of St. Christopher was purchased by the Rev. Father O'Connor in Pisa, Italy, for the shrine. St. Christopher medals are used by autoists and travelers and the shrine will have especial significance to them.

The legend of St. Christopher follows: Offerus, a strong man of the third century, was urged by a hermit, Babyllus, to enter the service of Christ. To help his fellowmen Offerus lived on the bank of a turbulent stream and ferried travelers across on his shoulders. However, he would not pray nor fast, and doubted the Christian beliefs.

One day there came a child and Offerus began to carry him across the river. In midstream he found the child growing heavier and he exclaimed, "What I borne the whole world on my shoulders it could not have been heavier than thou." Pressing on, he reached the opposite bank, when he was astonished to hear the child say: "Marry me, for thou has borne upon thy shoulders not only the world, but Him who created it."

Offerus refused to believe, but the child, to dispel his doubts, bade him drive his staff into the earth and it took root, leaved and bore fruit within the space of a day. Offerus then believed and telling his story to the hermit was baptized and henceforth was called Christopher, meaning Christ-bearer. He became so great a preacher and converted so many, that the ruler of the kingdom persecuted him. Finally putting him to death with torture.

VISITING MINISTER WILL PREACH HERE

The other services of the church will be held as usual.

The public is cordially invited to attend all the services of the church.

AGED MAN KILLED MANSFIELD, O., June 28.—Stephen Fitzmaurice, 88, was instantly killed here when he was struck by a Big Four passenger train. Fitzmaurice, former watchman for the Big Four, was nearly blind and failed to see the watchman's stop signal, it is thought.
